

Introduction

Fortem cares about ensuring that its supply chain is free from modern slavery. We know that slavery, servitude, forced labour and human trafficking is a growing issue and that no sector of industry can consider itself immune or untainted.

Our business

We are a national property solutions provider operating in England and Wales. Our main services consist of repairs and maintenance, energy services, cyclical maintenance and project work. Our contracts range from specialist projects to strategic long-term repairs and maintenance contracts. Our clients are predominantly local authorities and residential social landlords, although we operate in many other sectors too. We have a large directly employed trade workforce which means that the welfare of the majority of those who deliver our services is under our direct care.

Our supply chain

Our primary supply chain consists of building trade and construction sub-contract partners as well as materials vendors. Our sub-contracting ranges from highly skilled services to semi-skilled labour. We develop and maintain strong long-term relationships with our supply chain and predominantly contract with small to medium sized businesses. We have risk assessed our supply chain, consultants and labour agencies. Our use of agency labour is tightly controlled centrally through a small panel of suppliers.

Policies

We publish our Modern Slavery Policy on our website, which sets out our zero tolerance approach to modern slavery and identifies related policies.

Contractual controls

We impose contractual controls on our supply chain and operate a Supply Chain Code of Conduct which makes clear the expectation that we have of our supply chain in relation to preventing modern slavery. We use a range of measures to vet our supply chains, including ConstructionLine, Builders Profile and SSIP.

Training

We operate in an environment which already requires vigilance to safeguarding and security concerns. We have built on this through delivering specific training on modern slavery, from our induction process through to toolbox talks, and programmes for our management and online training.

What we did in the year to 31 December 2022

This year members from our Modern Slavery Working Group attend different forums and updates delivered by key organisations such as the GLAA in order to share best practice and initiatives on ways in which our industry can continue to combat modern slavery.

We are continuing to explore new initiatives and processes which we can implement to complement and improve the safeguards our business already has in place.

This statement is made pursuant to section 54(1) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and constitutes the slavery and human trafficking statement of the companies listed below for the financial year ending 31 December 2022.
